Rotary Holds Food Drive for Adults With Intellectual Disabilities

The Glendale Noon Rotary Club, which is dedicated to bridging the gap for underserved and vulnerable populations in the community, recently gathered more than $800 to purchase nutritious, nonperishable goods for the Campbell Center. The Campbell Center operates three residential homes for 22 adults with intellectual and developmental disabilities.

The list of items requested for the food drive emphasized a need for nonperishable yet nutritious items, such as canned soups, proteins, fruits and vegetables, granola bars, peanut butter, jelly/jam and applesauce. The Rotary organizers of the event recommended that each donation contain about a week's worth of food for one person to make for a convenient drop-off at the Campbell Center headquarters for distribution to residents.

Among those who facilitated the drop-off were Rotary members Elizabeth Manasserian, Joy Garcia, George Saikali and Art Markarian. TCC executive leadership members David Fields and Nancy Niebrugge, TCC associate Maria and TCC board member Danny Manasserian attended to accept and thank the Glendale

Noon Rotary for its efforts.

"It's incredible to see the community rally around to support our associates," said David Fields, executive director. "We aim to be holistic in our service — it's so important to be able to provide nutritious meals for them."

"We're so excited to contribute to the Campbell Center's cause," said Elizabeth Mansserian, Rotary member and an organizer of the food drive. "Seeing the look of joy on Maria's face was so rewarding."

Adventist Health Glendale's Advanced Structural Heart Disease Program continued to expand with the first two MitraClip surgeries in Glendale history. This cutting-edge interventional cardiology service reduces risk and speeds recovery for patients, according to a spokesperson.

Glendale Heart Institute announced that Dr. Amirreza Solhpour and Dr. Amir Sadrzadeh Rafie were able to perform the first two successful MitraClip cases in the city, which also made Adventist Health Glendale one of the only nine hospitals (out of 121 in greater Los Angeles) to offer this complex procedure.

"We're one of just nine hospitals in the Los Angeles area to offer this minimally invasive procedure. Congratulations to Dr. Amirreza Solhpour, Dr. Amir Rafie, Dr. Armand Rostamian and the entire team for continued advancements that serve our communities so well," a hospital spokesperson said. "We are so grateful to all of our colleagues at Adventist Health Glendale who have helped us build and expand our Advanced Structural Heart Disease program to a full comprehensive one."
